1. Introduction

This report is written by a Corporate Multimedia consultant who was tasked with conducting an assessment of a local organization (Fadwa Collection) and identifying the need for their multimedia communications. The organization selected for this case study is a small e-business called Fadwa Collection. This report will include information about the history of the organization; the organization's current issues related to multimedia; the multimedia content the organization would require to meet those multimedia challenges; and evidence of the organization's digital presence and how it relates to the VBE concepts of Responsibility, Integrity, Inclusiveness and Sustainability.

2. Organisation Information

Fadwa Collection is an online-based store that does not have a retail outlet for selling its products. The entire operations of the Fadwa Collection are carried out online. Customers purchase products by means of social media platforms (Instagram), and the company delivers the purchased items via delivery services. This is representative of many small businesses operating in many countries, which are operated entirely by one person.

3. Business Analysis

3.1 Products, Customers, and Objectives

Fadwa Collection sells items that include: women's clothing, mobile accessories, bags, and jewelry accessories. These many categories will bring in people from all areas to purchase their products. Most of its customers are youthful females who enjoy low-cost fashionable clothing and spend a large amount of time spent using social media. The major company goals include attracting new customers, creating a recognizable brand image, increasing sales, and building strong relationships with customers through repeat purchases.

3.2 Current Digital Presence

Fadwa Collection at present uses only Instagram to post product images, and WhatsApp to handle customer orders/enquiries/queries. The business has no Facebook page, no TikTok account, and no website/catalogue; therefore, it relies completely on one social media outlet to generate views of the products and one mobile application to manage all contact with customers.

4. Current Multimedia Problems

From observing the organisation's digital presence, the following problems were identified:

- Inconsistent photo and video quality – photos are taken with a normal phone camera under different lighting each time, so the feed does not look professional.
- No consistent branding – there is no logo, colour theme, or post template, so customers may not easily recognise the brand.
- Full dependence on a single platform – relying only on Instagram is risky, since an algorithm change or account issue can sharply cut a business's visibility overnight (Beacon Media + Marketing, 2026).
- No professional catalogue – customers must scroll through old posts or ask through WhatsApp to see products.
- Very limited video content – short-form video, which performs well on TikTok and Reels, is barely used.
- Disorganised order management – handling all orders through WhatsApp chat makes it hard to track customer history and stock.

5. Multimedia Requirements Analysis

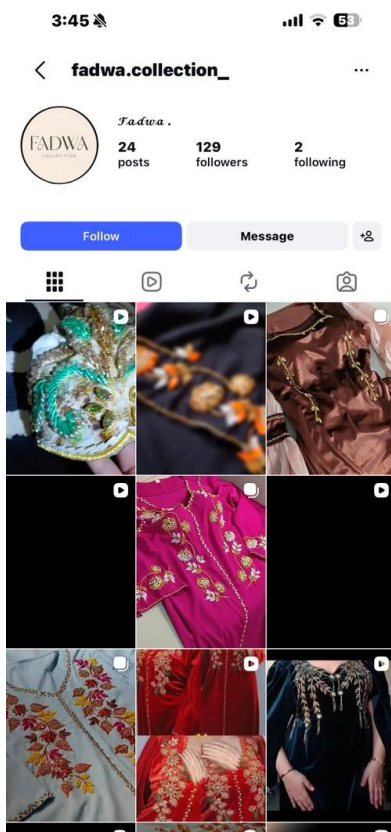

Based on the previous challenges Fadwa Collection has with regard to multimedia content:

- Facebook Page - to be able to target those customers who are using Facebook for their shopping needs compared to Instagram and also take advantage of the Business Features of Facebook, which include Shop and Messenger.

- TikTok account - to be able to create short-form video content and be able to connect with the younger demographics of potential customers via styling videos and new arrival videos.
- Simple website or catalogue - so the customer can view all the items from one location, and Fadwa Collection has an owned digital property that is not dependent upon just one social media channel (Beacon Media + Marketing, 2026).
- Visual Branding - A simple logo; a consistent color scheme; and a similar photography style throughout each platform.
- Promotional Videos - To keep customers' attention longer than static images and increase organic reach, therefore allowing Fadwa Collection to have high-quality exposure with a limited advertising budget (Trinity Strategic Solutions, 2025).

6. Supporting Evidence

The following evidence supports the findings of this analysis:

These pictures illustrate how most of today's products rely on plain old smartphone pics with no consistent brand identity, and that all order management is done by hand via a group chat as opposed to being organized in some type of catalog or website.

7. Reflection on VBE Considerations

This analysis also considers how any future recommendation for Fadwa Collection should support responsible, ethical, and sustainable business practices.

- Responsibility – future content should show the true colour, size, and condition of each product to protect customers from disappointment.
- Integrity – this analysis is based on honest, accurate observation, and any future content should use properly licensed templates, music, and assets.
- Inclusiveness – future content should welcome different customers, for example through bilingual captions and a range of price points.
- Sustainability – moving from scattered chats to a digital catalogue and website supports long-term stability and reduces reliance on information that can easily be lost.

8. Conclusion

The requirements for the multimedia component of the Fadwa Collection are clearly stated. At present, the entire collections' on-line presence is limited to just two media channels (Instagram & WhatsApp), limiting customer awareness and making the collection's overall exposure susceptible to issues caused by either of those channels. Furthermore, there is no consistent branding of digital content or quality of video content. To resolve each of these limitations, a Facebook page, a TikTok account, a simple website/catalogue, a promotional video, and a digital brochure will need to be developed. These elements will form the basis of the next phase of this project when recommendations regarding suitable hardware and software options will be made.
